

May 24, 2010 at 12:07pm
Subject: Geekversity refund
Hi,

I noticed that you are a member of the Geekversity Issues Group.

I'm a Sydney-based lawyer from the online legal service provider <http://www.facebook.com/l/1e67d;AffordableLegalServices.com.au>. We specialise in commercial disputes and debt recovery. Recently we've been working with a number of former and current Geekversity students to pursue refunds of the fees they paid to Geekversity. We are having real and consistent success pursuing refunds, particularly for students who didn't sign the Geekversity Variation Deed in or around November 2009.

The reason I write is to offer our legal services to you.

For students that didn't sign the Geekversity Variation Deed in or around November 2009 we're offering our services on a no-win, no-fee basis. If we can't get you a refund or reasonable settlement offer, we won't charge you a cent. If you do receive a refund or settlement amount, we'll take a small commission, leaving you with the majority of that refund or settlement amount. Under this fee structure, there is absolutely zero risk for you.

For students that did sign the Geekversity Variation Deed in or around November 2009, our experience has been a little different. Put simply, the provisions of that Geekversity Variation Deed make it much harder to seek refunds, and our work is much more complex and involved. As a consequence, we're offering our services to students that did sign the Geekversity Variation Deed in or around November 2009 at our standard hourly rates.

As you may know, there have been a lot of changes in Geekversity recently. There have been a lot of changes in personnel, trading names and ownership of the Geekversity program which may affect your ability to seek a refund of your Geekversity fees. If you want to pursue a refund, you need to get in fast. If you'd like to pursue a refund of your Geekversity fees or would like to chat about your options please feel free to contact me.

My contact details are as follows:

Phone: (02) 8011 4425

Email: Michael@http://www.facebook.com/l/1e67d;AffordableLegalServices.com.au skype: michael.a.forster

Sorry for the long message. I look forward to hearing from you, and to working with you to enforce your legal rights.

Michael

To reply to this message, follow the link below: